Ans-1

- 1) Divine Theory: The state is created by Gods and the ruler governs as god's chosen representative. Obedience to the king is seen as a religious duty.
- 2) Force Theory: The state arises when powerful groups conquered weaker ones and establish control law and administration through strength and fear.
- 3) Patriarchal theory: The state evolved naturally from the family system. Family grew into clan, clan into tribe, and tribe into a political state with the ruler as a father figure.
- 4) Social Contact Theory: People voluntarily formed the state by giving up some freedom to a common authority in order to gain security, order and protection.

Ans-2 Purushartha means the four aims of human life in Indian Philosophy.

- 1) Dharma: Moral duty and righteous conduct that guides life.
- 2) Artha: Material prosperity and economic security earned through right means.

3. Kama - Pleasure love and emotional satisfaction in a disciplined way.

4. Moksha - Liberation from ignorance and the cycle of birth and death, the ultimate goal.

Ans: According to Kautilya's Arthashastra Knowledge (vidya) is classified into four main branches

1. Anvikshiki - Philosophy and logic (study of reasoning, self and truth)

2. Trayi - The three vedas (religious and moral knowledge)

3. Varta - Economics and practical sciences (agriculture, trade, animal husbandry)

4) Dandashiti - Political Science and administration (law governance, punishment and statecraft).

Together these form complete knowledge needed to run both individual life and the state.

Ans 3 The Ashrama System in Indian Philosophy divides human life into four stages.

- 1) Brahmacharya - Student life devoted to education, discipline and celibacy.
- 2) Grihastha - Householder stage focused on marriage, family and social duties.
- 3) Vanaprastha - Retired life, gradual withdrawal from worldly affairs and spiritual focus.
- 4) Sanyasa - Renunciation, complete detachment and pursuit of spiritual liberation.

Ans 5 Kingship:

Kingship in ancient ^{Indian} political thought was based on Dharma. The king was the protector of people, maintainer of law and order, and head of administration, ruling for public welfare, not personal pleasure.

Council of Ministers

The king was assisted by a council of learned and experienced ministers who advised him on administration, law, war, finance and foreign policy, ensuring wise and collective decision making.
